

LHASSA TAKEN; LOSE A LAMA

England Reaches Capital of Thibet Only to Find Ruler Has Disappeared.

TROOPS IN THE SACRED CITY NOW

Colonel Younghusband's Forces Have Reached Their Destination, But Find Their Work Has All Been in Vain.

[Special by Scripps-Mellie.] London, Aug. 8.—Following from the profanation of an interview with the commander of the British expedition now encamped inside the sacred city of Lhasa, the dalai lama has taken refuge in a monastery eighteen miles from his capital. From this retreat his followers declare that he will not emerge for three years. His seclusion is absolute. Even his highest officers of state are denied admission to his presence.

Depending on Colonel Younghusband's assurance that none of the monasteries will be entered by the British in the absence of an attack, from the Buddhist priests, who should have been admitted with their walls, the lama's followers hope that the present sanctuary will be respected.

The entrance of English soldiers even into the city of Lhasa was resented to Colonel Younghusband, as fraught with danger to the lama's life through shock to his religious feelings. To force an interview with the head of the church himself would constitute such a sacrilege that the Tibetans shrink from the very thought of such a contingency.

Situation is Awkward. The dalai lama's seclusion involves some difficulties for Colonel Younghusband. Treaties with the Tibetans have never been difficult to secure. Their persistent disregard by the natives, however, has caused untold complications, and it was to obviate the possibility of another repudiation by the lama of the undertakings entered into by his subordinates, as well as for punitive purposes, that the present expedition was undertaken. Whether the British commander will consent to deal again with any one but the head of the government, even in the city of Lhasa, is uncertain.

Colonel Younghusband has already received the humblest assurances from the lama that every concession which he desires, short of a meeting with the lama, will be granted. The official has paid a ceremonial visit to the English camp bringing gifts of food for the troops and conveying pledges of his assistance in reaching a satisfactory settlement of all differences between the Tibetans and the English.

British on Their Guard. While the natives appear not alone peaceful but actually broken-hearted at the foreigners' intrusion into the most hallowed spot in Asia, Colonel Younghusband is overlooking no precaution to guard against a surprise. Guards are kept constantly posted and every preparation is made for the sternest repression of the first symptom of hostility.

The expedition, numbering only 5,000 British and Indian troops, is, of course, vastly outnumbered, and some uneasiness is felt in England concerning its safety, despite the superiority of its military equipment to that of the Tibetans. The English camp is one mile from the sacred mountain of Potola, on which is situated the dalai lama's palace, and only a short distance from the private grounds surrounding the edifice.

RUSSIA TELLS A DIFFERENT STORY

Russians Over-Estimated the Japanese Losses by Many Thousands.

[Special by Scripps-Mellie.] Rome, Aug. 8.—A dispatch from Tientsin says the Japanese have silenced the batteries at Port Arthur after a prolonged cannonade. The fall of the port is reported as inevitable.

No Change. St. Petersburg, Aug. 8.—Sakharoff reports there is no change in the position of the Manchurians. He signified the reports of the Japanese losses were untrue.

Are Hot After City. Tokyo, Aug. 8.—Unofficial reports were received yesterday that the Japanese army besieging Port Arthur has captured commanding positions in the north and northwest of the city at distances of from 2,500 to 3,000 meters from the main line of Russian defenses.

Gen. Kuroki in an official report states that on July 31, at Yankeidong and Yushulintzu his forces took 268 prisoners, of whom 158 were unarmored, and buried 512 Russian dead, including six officers. Gen. Oku's official report of the occupation of Ichang shows that the Russian resistance was limited to desultory artillery fire.

Three Boats Chase Fourteen. Tokyo, Aug. 8.—Admiral Togo reports that while the torpedo boat destroyers Otori and Akikaze were scouting off Port Arthur on Aug. 5 a squadron of fourteen Russian torpedo boats entered the harbor and immediately separated into three divisions. One of these, consisting of four destroyers, steamed southwest; another, consisting of seven, steamed south, while the third, made up of the three remaining destroyers, sailed in the direction of Hsienhseng, their evident intention being to surround the Japanese scout boats.

The latter, after exchanging a heavy fire at a range of 5,000 meters, steered for Hsienhseng and intercepted the three Russians sailing in that direction. The Russian craft immediately turned about and retreated into the harbor. The Japanese boats, reinforced by the destroyer Hsienhseng, after a short pursuit, steamed south at full speed and attacked the other two squadrons of Russian destroyers, which had combined, and although they formed a flotilla of eleven destroyers, the commander of the Russian boats refused to accept fight with the Japanese and retreated at all speed into Port Arthur harbor. The Japanese had no casualties, while no estimate is made of the damage done to the Russian crews.

Admiral Togo adds that the entire fleet about Port Arthur is sounding the praises of the three destroyers which put the fourteen Russian boats to flight.

STATE CONCERNS COST LESS MONEY

State's Monthly Bills for July Several Thousand Dollars Less Than Usual.

The expenses of the nine state charitable, penal and corrective institutions under the management of the state board of control have been several thousand dollars less for the month of July than for the previous month. This is because the schools for the deaf at Delavan and the school for the blind at Janesville are having their summer vacations, and also because many "tail end" accounts were closed up in June, the last month of the state fiscal year. The total expenses of the institutions for the month of July, as audited by the state board of control at the recent August meeting, were $53,471.82, as follows:

State hospital at Mendota	$9,765.29
Northern hospital at Winnebago	2,986.73
School for deaf at Delavan	1,848.17
School for blind at Janesville	1,839.10
Industrial school at Waubesa	4,798.16
State prison at Waupun	8,109.20
Public school at Sparta	2,278.90
Feeble minded home at Chippewa Falls	9,515.31
Reformatory at Green Bay	5,669.84
Total expenditures	$53,471.82

NEGRO JUSTICE SENDS MAN TO JAIL FOR LIFE

Magistrate Fails to Designate Term of Imprisonment, Leaving White Farmer in Peculiar Position.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8.—For an alleged case of kidnapping a negro came before William Norcross, a prosperous Canadian country farmer, was committed to jail for life.

Norcross was arrested by Jacob Sands, a special policeman at the Hackettstown station, near Hackettfield on the charge of kidnapping and other offenses. William A. Williams, a negro justice of the peace at Snow Hill, promptly committed Norcross to the county jail, but he failed to limit the term of imprisonment. Nothing short of a writ of habeas corpus will get the farmer out of jail now. Presenting it to the Court of Sessions, but he said he could not do so until he had conferred with the justice. Williams will be released, not for an explanation, Norcross insists that he has not touched a drop of liquor for many months, and that he was arrested because he had been a gambler and a peep vendor in a put up a stand on his property after he had been ordered of the court meeting grounds.

BEGGAR ORDERED TO LEAVE CITY

Madison Gives a Professional Beggar Ten Days to Make His Departure.

[Special to The Gazette.] Madison, Wis., August 8.—Robert E. Straught, a pauper who has greatly annoyed the citizens of Madison for more than a year with his whining and begging, was Saturday given ten days in which to get out of town by County Judge A. G. Zimmerman. Straught made it a practice to block street corners and beg money from all people who passed by. The police frequently ordered him to vacate the walk but he persistently refused to obey the orders. He has a brother living in La Valle, Sauk county, with whom he will make his residence.

THE CROOK WITH THE GLASS EYE

Now Languishing in Local Lock-Up is Honored with Two Pictures in Police Magazine.

The last issue of "The Detective," published in Chicago, contains two good likenesses and descriptions of the crook with the glass eye who was arrested by Detective Louis Lett of the St. Paul road in the act of trying to pick the pocket of a passenger on the train coming in from Madison to Janesville on circus day. One photograph sent in from New York on July 21 gives the man's name as Charles Johnson, alias Samuel Ackerman. The other from Grand Rapids, Mich., July 19, gives the name as Frank Adams. A tattooed picture of a girl standing on a drum on the left wrist is given as an identification mark in both instances and the pictures might have been taken by the same camera. The gentleman himself says that he is fifty-one years old and his incarceration in Janesville is his first appearance. Detective Lett says that in his opinion it would take a strong horse to drag at one time all the pocket-books this notorious character has "lifted." He is looking for the bag of "junk" the fellow is believed to have secreted somewhere in Janesville.

MADISON WOMAN IN LAW'S TANGLE

Girl Who Ran Away to Marry Indian Juggler, May Have a Guardian.

[Special to The Gazette.] Madison, Wis., August 8.—Helen May Golding Nathoo's troubles are by no means at an end. She ran away a month ago and married a Hindoo magician. Saturday her brother, Chauncey Golding, filed a petition in the county court in this city praying for the appointment of a guardian over the personal property of the woman which amounts to $500. He alleges that she is entirely incompetent and lacks will power. Before her marriage last spring she was arrested in the apartments of Chekoree Nathoo, a Hindoo juggler who came to Madison last winter and started the Capital city folk with his wonderful tricks. At the time of the arrest Nathoo had nearly succeeded in securing $800 which the Golding woman had in the bank. He told her that he would organize a shop troupe and that she would be the prima donna. Her relatives interfered in time to prevent the deal and Nathoo was placed under arrest. He was sentenced to the Dane county jail for six months but at the expiration of one month his fine was paid by a friend. Nathoo left for Illinois and his fiancée followed him. Her love for the little Hindoo was so great that she could not resist the temptation of becoming his wife.

Moore, instructor in mechanics, takes a lucrative position in the engineering college of the University of Illinois.

DAVIDSON VISITS THE SUGAR MILL

Owner of the Rock County Sugar Company Pays Janesville a Flying Visit.

Captain James Davidson visited the Rock County Sugar plant this morning making a thorough tour of inspection of the work thus far accomplished. Since his last visit a few weeks ago the work on the mammoth building has been brought nearer completion and work on the huge chimney is well along. While in the city Captain Davidson is the guest of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Osborn.

Hurrying Work. Two hundred odd men are at work at the sugar works, almost every nationality making up the personnel of the working force. Farm-houses in the neighborhood have all been converted into boarding houses and the Italian laborers have quarters of their own where they eat the dishes cooked by a chef of their own nationality. Recently some forty of these spent an afternoon and evening celebrating the marriage of one of their number and as a final of their evening's enjoyment sat in a row and fired pistols off as fast as they could be loaded and fired.

Immense Chimney. The immense chimney of the plant when completed will be nearly a hundred and sixty feet high. Already the masonry work has reached the top of the iron frame-work. It will be the highest chimney in this part of the state without a doubt. Considering the number of men employed and the vast amount of dangerous work to be done and heavy loads to be lifted to high places it is remarkable that more men are not injured than are. As it is, the casualty list is extremely small.

AWFUL WRECK KILLED MANY

From Thirty to Forty Persons Lose Their Lives in a Wreck on the Rio Grande.

TRAIN GOES THROUGH A BRIDGE

Cloudburst Swells Fountain Creek at Pinon, and the Waters Weakened the Structure Which Gave Way Under Train.

[Special by Scripps-Mellie.] Pueblo, Colo., Aug. 8.—Between thirty and fifty persons are reported to have been killed and drowned in a railway wreck on the Rio Grande at Pinon, twenty-five miles north of the city.

The Rio Grande passenger train No. 11, south bound, went through the bridge over Fountain creek at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening.

The engine and five coaches were thrown into the creek, which is swollen from recent heavy rains. The train was due to arrive at Pueblo at 8:15 p. m. It carried many citizens of the city, who were returning from Denver. A large party of tourists were also on board.

A wrecking train was dispatched to the scene as soon as the news was received by the railroad officials here.

Relief on Special Trains. Then came the news that many of the passengers had been killed or injured, and that perhaps scores of others had been injured.

A special train was made up immediately and every available physician in Pueblo dispatched to the scene. The wreck undoubtedly was due to a cloudburst. For hours Sunday evening the country north of Pueblo was swept by the heaviest rain storm that has been experienced in this vicinity for a score of years. Small streams were swollen into raging torrents, bridges swept away, and the roadbed of the railway washed and weakened in spite of the heavy stone ballast.

Floods Weaken Bridge. Fountain creek in which the Rio Grande train plunged, runs through a winding defile, and through the hills, and it was filled with a rush of waters so impetuous that the railroad bridge was barely able to stand alone, even before the train dashed upon it, and was precipitated into the flood below.

The city of Pueblo and vicinity felt the effects of the storm. It was one of the worst electric and rain storms the city has experienced for many years. The streets were flooded and rendered impassable during the storm. It was this storm which delayed the work of assembling the relief party. The torrents of rain made it almost impossible to traverse the streets, while the electrical disturbance disorganized the entire telephone system.

Lives Lost at Trinidad. Trinidad, Colo., Aug. 8.—A cloudburst in Fisher canon, three miles north of here, Sunday night, caused the loss of two lives and flooded mines and other property in and adjacent to the canon. William Haligh, general manager of the Trinidad Coal company, which owns several mines in Fisher canon, his son, George Haligh, and an employee, William Richardson, while driving up the canon were caught in the flood caused by the cloudburst.

William Haligh and Richardson were drowned. George Haligh was thrown upon a rock by the force of the current, where he clung until rescued. The body of William Haligh was recovered five miles from where he drowned.

A heavy rain fell north of here. Two bridges on the Santa Fe road near Elmore were washed out. It is reported that bridges and roadbeds of the Colorado and Southern have been damaged also.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 8.—William Hall, coal heaver, was struck on the head with a piece of coal thrown by John Coleman, a fellow workman, and knocked into the Ohio river and drowned. Coleman died. Hall was using a hose to keep down the dust from the coal, when in jest he turned it on Coleman. He persisted against Coleman's protest until the latter, thoroughly angered, threw a lump of coal, which struck Hall on the head.

The accident occurred in the second inning, on the last play through the other seven innings and made two hits, winning the game. At the hotel afterward he fell unconscious and never recovered.

TOULON'S GREAT ARSENAL GOES UP IN SMOKE TODAY

Flames Threaten To Wipe Out the Base of The Great French Supply Station.

[Special by Scripps-Mellie.] Toulon, France, Aug. 8.—A fire started in the great arsenal today is a splendid Sunday afternoon in the city. The flames are threatening the base of the French supply station.

The arsenal is a vast complex of buildings, workshops, and stores, situated on a hill overlooking the sea. It is the principal base of the French navy, and contains a vast amount of naval stores, including gunpowder, shells, and other munitions. The fire started in a warehouse, and has spread rapidly, threatening the entire arsenal.

FARM PRODUCE MUCH CHEAPER

AN OVER SUPPLY CAUSES REDUCTION IN PRICE.

GOOD POTATO CROP ASSURED

Vines in Excellent Condition, and Unless Heavy Rains Spoil Crop, Tubers Will Be Cheap This Fall.

Vegetables.
New potatoes—60 cents bu.
Sweet corn—15c doz. ears.
Cabbage—5 to 10c head.
Cucumbers—30c dozen.
Home grown tomatoes—20c basket.
Green peppers—30c dozen.
Celery—10c peck.
Telephone peas—35c peck.
Beets—3 bunches for 10c.
Cauliflower—10c head.

Fruits.
Elihu's peaches—30 and 35c basket.
California Bartlett pears—20c doz.
Michigan blackberries—15c quart.
Bananas—15 to 20c dozen.
Illinois gem muskmelons—60c basket.

Meats.
Home grown apples—10c peck.
Eating apples (imported)—60c peck.
Cooking apples (imported)—40c peck.
Oranges—25 to 45 cents dozen.

Other Farm Products.
Eggs—19c a dozen.
Dairy butter—18 and 19c lb.
Creamery butter—22c lb.
Comb honey—15c lb.
Timothy hay—$7 and $8 a ton.
Wild marsh hay—$6 and $7 a ton.
Old oats—30 cents a bushel.

A steady increase in farm produce has brought about several reductions in price on the market this week. The plentiful supply of sweet corn and new potatoes together with a prospect of an excellent crop have reduced the price of these vegetables nearly 25 per cent. In spite of the fact that now is a busy season of the year for the farmer, local grocers have been well supplied with all the home grown vegetables.

The weather in the south has been favorable for the fruit crop, and the crop of peaches has ripened so rapidly that the growers are forced to sell for what they can get. Elihu's peaches are being sold for 30 and 35 cents a basket. Plums and pears are slightly cheaper this week. The large Michigan blackberries were raised from 12 to 15 cents a quart on account of a good demand and scarcity of supply. Home grown apples are hard and green and suitable for cooking only. They are being sold for 35 and 40 cents a peck. The apple trees in the country are reported as being loaded with fruit and it will probably be quite cheap this fall. Muskmelons have taken a drop to 60 cents a basket during the week and there seems to be few watermelons on the market. Large shipments of Missouri melons will arrive in a few days and then the public will have the "real thing."

Farm Products.
Threshing of oats has commenced in many localities. Some farmers say that much of the crop will be straw, but more seem to think that there will be plenty of grain. Sugar beets are making splendid progress and a good rain will insure an excellent crop. Tobacco and corn are still behind time but would do wonders with a few heavy showers.

Big Potato Crop.
Conditions are ideal for a splendid potato crop all over the northwest. There are plenty of bugs, but the vines are said to be in excellent shape, being green, strong and vigorous, and all indications point to one of the largest crops in the history of the northwestern states.

The new potatoes are good in size, smooth, round and of excellent quality. The acreage, too, is large this year, and there should be potatoes for everybody at very fair prices this fall. The price will probably be around 35 cents a bushel to the farmer, and about 55 cents to the consumer. This is a rough estimate from present conditions.

The crop appears safe now, although last year the heavy damage which resulted in such a shortage was done later than this. The excessive rains caused the potatoes to decay.

UNCLE SAM'S DEAD LETTER OFFICE

Much Unclaimed Mail Is Sent to Washington Each Year From Janesville.

A letter is rarely mislabeled when it is written with ordinary intelligence and is familiar with the conventions which pertain to postal transmissions in the United States. If the person to whom the letter is sent has moved, with little delay his letter pursues him. If carelessness by the sender confounds numbers, streets, counties, towns, even states, with what infinite pains are the mistakes corrected by the postal clerks? Yet with all this care more than 30,000 unclaimed letters and packages are included in the general postal museum on the ground floor of the building.

The first thing which the visitor to Uncle Sam's dead letter office encounters is the pathetic case of soldiers' photographs. As he turns leaf by leaf of it he fancies the weary waiting at the home fireside for the face of the soldier boy which never came; alas, many times the lad himself found his sepulcher on the battlefield or died in the hospital, and this priceless memento would so have comforted the mourning hearts who perchance waited long and hopelessly for his coming. The faces are faded, the paper yellow with age, strange in feature to those who look on them now, yet there was a time when the lovelight from each pictured eye was mirrored in some other.

Of the thousands of unclaimed letters and packages which are annually sent to Washington, the Janesville postoffice sends on an average of 20 per week or over 1,000 in the course of the year. Unclaimed advertising matter is destroyed at the local office. Much of the unclaimed stuff does not reach the persons to whom it was to be sent, on account of poor handwriting. So poor, in fact, that even such experts in reading names and addresses written in all kinds of hands, as Uncle Sam's postal clerks, who decipher thousands of them every year, cannot make them out. Quite a lot of the stuff is misdirected and no small amount of it finally reaches its proper destination through the efforts of the postal clerks, who trace it out by the United States directory of all streets and their numbers in the country. Of course many cities have streets of similar names, and in such the correct address of the person for whom the letter is intended cannot be found. The Janesville postoffice traces out about 15 or 20 such names and addresses in a week through this directory. People often call for advertisements long after they have been sent to the dead letter office, but in that case it is only a matter of a few days until they are sent back to the home office, for every bit of matter which is sent to Washington is numbered, and a list of the numbers and descriptions of the articles kept at the home office.

Every year the United States postal authorities hold an auction sale to dispose of the packages which have accumulated. Crowds of curious hawkeyes, people who are always ready to get something for nothing, come to these sales. Packages sent in violation of the postal laws and those which weigh more than the prescribed four pounds are also auctioned off.

News for the Railroad Men.

Fully 2,500 people were in attendance Saturday at the third annual picnic given by the employees of the North-Western at North-Western park in North Fond du Lac. A special made up of eight coaches arrived in North Fond du Lac at 10 o'clock Saturday morning from Janesville, and the visitors were safely landed at the grounds at 10:30. Every seat on the train was taken, and many were obliged to stand. The incoming trains from the north in the morning were crowded with visitors, especially the Chicago passenger which arrived at North Fond du Lac at 11:30 o'clock.

The visitors were well supplied with lunch baskets. On reaching the grounds these were checked in a furniture car which had been arranged for that purpose. Another car contained large jars of lemonade and other drinks. These were dispensed free of charge, and consequently this car was decidedly popular. Basket dinners were served in the park at noon.

The picnic Saturday undoubtedly was the largest and most successful that has ever been given. The committee in charge of the picnic were much complimented. Everything was done that would add to the comfort of the guests. A number of attractions such as "nigger doll" racks, etc., were located on the grounds, and all were well patronized. The perfect weather done its full part toward making the picnic a success.

Afternoon Program
The afternoon program was opened with an address of welcome by Division Superintendent H. W. Balth, who renewed the invitations sent out by the employees in a very cordial manner. Mr. Balth spoke of the pleasure it was to the officials and employees of the road turn out in such large numbers and assist in making the anniversary picnic a success. Attorney L. A. Williams of Fond du Lac was the next speaker. He referred particularly to the growth of North Fond du Lac as being substantial and the result of the location of the railroad shops. He said that the railroad men had reason to be proud of their village, for it has all of the modern improvements that are to be had in cities many times its size.

The next number was a recitation by Miss Nechtway, and this was followed by an address by Master Mechanic J. E. Heath of Chicago. Mr. Heath took for his subject a topic of absorbing interest to all railroad men, and that was "Railroading."

It was estimated in the afternoon that the attendance from Fond du Lac increased the number on the grounds to 4,000 people. The North-Western had issued 2,500 tickets, and of this number 850 were held by people residing on the Janesville division.

Dance at Night
A large pavilion had been arranged for those desiring to dance. The Corbin-Relle orchestra was in attendance. The Janesville special did not leave till 12:15, thus allowing the visitors along the line to enjoy the dancing social. They arrived in Janesville at 4 a. m. Sunday morning.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Wisconsin Central railway that hereafter all agents who travel for that line will be known as traveling agents. The old system of having freight and passenger agents will be abolished and the agents will now represent all departments. The Central is the first western line to do away with the special agents for each department.

The Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis and the Illinois Central will run coach excursions to St. Louis during August from points in Illinois within a radius of 200 miles of St. Louis. This action is taken independent of the other Illinois roads, which voted down the proposition.

Former President F. H. Prince, of the Pere Marquette, has issued a statement in which he denies that either the Vanderbilt, Rock Island or Frisco interests are behind the deal of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton and the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul company have erected a new bulletin board at the passenger station for the convenience of the traveling public. This is a good move in the right direction.

Conductor James McCaffrey's train, due here at 7:30 Saturday evening, struck a cow at the Western avenue crossing, instantly killing the animal.

Traveling Passenger Agent William Bowes of the Illinois Central was in the city today on business.

"GIRL FROM DIXIE" OPENS THE YEAR

Myers' Grand Theatre a Beautiful Sight To Look Upon—Many Changes.

Again Janesville is to have a musical comedy from the prolific pen of Harry B. Smith. Its chief characteristics are said to be "originality," "plausibility" and "wholesomeness." The underlying theme of the entire play may be said to be contained in the one word "Dixie."

Kitty Calvert, the heroine, belongs to that class who will always tell you that they used to rule the land in antebellum days, but "ain't much now."

Another character is Squire Mink of Tamarack bar, both legal and otherwise. Regenbogen, a German musician, looms early and often with a most conspicuous thrust. Lord Dunsmore comes to Tamarack and promptly falls in love with Kitty Calvert. Of course there must be in a musical comedy these days, a bevy of some sort of "show girls," and this feature is not lacking in "A Girl from Dixie."

Though they may not be called "show girls" by the management—because that term is getting stale now—the "sixteen young women of haughty mien and proud carriage" will certainly be referred to as such by the public. The gowns of these same sixteen are said to have cost several hundreds of money and to outlast the sun in brilliancy. Instead of being the work of one man, the musical numbers are contributed by several among whom are many of America's representative musicians. Naturally the greatest variety will be afforded music lovers. Among the prominent people in the cast are Miss Genevieve Day, the clever prima donna soprano, and D. L. Don, the well-known comedian, Charles K. French, Clifford Leigh, Thos. J. Keogh, Charles H. Sheffer, Arthur T. Earnest, Harry Wiegand, Essie Lyons, Olga May and Elsie Blair.

Manager Myers was assured by his workmen this morning that the entire house would be in readiness for the opening attraction. Next season Mr. Myers plans to re-ent the house. It will take out the middle aisle represented in the above cut, and will place two aisles down the sides in the middle of the present rows of seats. These with the two outside aisles will make four entrances and exits from the floor of the house with no row of seats having more than ten chairs in it. Larger opera chairs will be placed in the house and with the present new decorations will make the house the finest in the state outside of Milwaukee. Manager Myers this morning started his subscription list for "A Girl from Dixie" and indications point to an extra large house for this opening attraction.

BIG LAND RUSH FOR TOWN SITES

Town of Bonesteel Is Temporarily Deserted by Land Seekers in the Rosebud Tract.

The transients and residents of Bonesteel, S. D., have practically abandoned the town in haste to reach the new townsite on the reservation, which, according to the proclamation, was thrown open for settlement at 9 a. m. today. The livery facilities of the town are inadequate to accommodate the people at the present time, but the rush will be over in a couple of days.

A party of nine pedestrians left there at noon for the first townsite, which is only twelve miles distant from Bonesteel. The impression of the citizens at Bonesteel is that only two towns on the reservation will attain notoriety. These towns, Burke and Gregory, will each try to land the county seat and there will be a vigorous fight for supremacy.

An enthusiastic meeting of about 300 persons interested in the town of Burke was held at the city hall in Bonesteel and effected a townsit organization. C. J. O'Connor was chosen secretary and treasurer and laid down some rules. To prevent trouble in the rush for position, government land officers were present, but took no part in the meeting.

Wanted—For U. S. army: Able-bodied unmarried men between ages of 21 and 25; citizens of United States, of good character and temperate habits, who can speak, read and write English. For information apply to Dr. J. B. Whiting, Jr., or recruiting office, Park hotel, Janesville, Wis.

GINSENG WANTED ONLY BY CHINESE

But the Demand in the Celestial Kingdom is an Increasing One—Large Price Paid.

One of the plants growing wild in northern Wisconsin is the ginseng. In the early days of lumbering and clearing in the woods, many people turned an honest penny by digging the root and selling it at the drug stores. Ginseng was found in localities heavily shaded, generally in forests of pine trees. The root was exported to China and the druggists paid fifty or twenty cents a pound for it.

It is rather singular that in the American pharmacopoeia ginseng has no medicinal value nor does it have any standing as a medicine in Europe. In China, however, it is very highly esteemed and has always been used as a medicine particularly for nervous exhaustion. Even the name is Chinese, derived from the Chinese word jinseng; man-like, and the only value or importance the plant has ever had in this country was because the root could be shipped to China where it would bring a good price.

Fifty years ago, the highest price in the United States was fifty cents a pound but the price has steadily increased until the wild root has been sold at $5.00 a pound.

So great has been the demand for that for several years past ginseng has been cultivated in the gardens and farms in the United States and the sale of the seed and plants has become a regular business. An interesting feature of the traffic is the fact that the cultivated root brings a price twenty per cent. higher than that paid for the wild article, and if the business is not overdone it promises to become quite an industry in the northwest and especially Wisconsin.

Ginseng succeeds best in well-drained, loose, friable, loamy soil, rich in vegetable mold, potash and phosphoric acid but not in nitrogen. From the time of planting until the root reaches marketable size requires about five years. There are peculiarities of soil and cultivation required by the growing plants that can be ascertained only by experience and there is little doubt that if a farmer or gardener gives the subject careful attention and is not discouraged by a series of unprofitable years in the end he may succeed in working up a business that is remunerative.

Naturally, as in the growth of any specialty there will be numerous attempts by many unskilled and thoughtless persons who hope to become suddenly rich without much effort, but a plant that needs five years in which to mature undoubtedly requires considerable skill in its cultivation and even if the root sells for $5.00 a pound few beginners will have the patience and technical skill to make its cultivation a success.

ANGORA GOATS VS. BELGIAN HARES

Big Money May Be Made in the Former, if Any Market Can Be Found.

A few years ago there was quite a general discussion over the question of raising Angora goats in this country, and particularly in certain sections of the country supposed to be well adapted to that industry. At that time it was claimed that parts of this state were particularly adapted to the raising of Angora goats, and it was even figured out that large profits could be made thereby with comparatively small initial expense and without much trouble. For this reason it will be a matter of increased interest to Wisconsin people who haven't been in that business, to know that arrangements are said to have been made in New York for the starting of a big Angora farm, or rather ranch, and it is predicted that a great deal of valuable information may be developed by the eastern men who are backing the enterprise.

This goat ranch in New York is located at Oelrice, in Sullivan county, and it is intended to embark in the business on quite an extensive scale. Several intending experimenters are already being planned, for instance the crossing of the Angora species of goat with a Mexican variety. Two thousand goats will be brought from New Mexico for the purpose. It is believed by the men at the head of the enterprise that through the cross-breeding of the Angora and the New Mexican goat a superior breed of goats with fine wool will be produced. The farmers of Sullivan county, New York, are generally interested in the goat farm, and if it proves a success many of them will engage in the business. The goats are very hardy animals and little difficulty is experienced in raising them and keeping them in condition. The wool is said to bring fifty cents a pound. It is worth nothing, however, that Isaac Stephenson, of Marinette, and his brother, S. M. Stephenson, of Menomonie, Mich., two wealthy lumbermen, engaged in the work of raising several hundred of these animals three years ago. They thrived wonderfully but when shearing-time came no market for the wool anywhere in the United States, or in fact in this hemisphere could be discovered.

Elgin Butter Market

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 1.—Seventy-five tubs of butter were offered on the board of trade today, with no bids and no sales. The official market is firm at 17c per lb., the same as for several weeks. A year ago the price was 18½c. The output for the week was 810,300 lbs.

AMONG THE WORLD'S WORKERS

News Notes From Various Sources of Great Interest to the Workman.

With the object of encouraging thrift among their employees, the directors of the North Eastern Railway company of England some years ago established a saving bank at which deposits of one shilling and upwards are received. The total amount inclusive of interest, now standing to the credit of the depositors is no less than £77,193 11lbs. 11d, giving an average of nearly 80 lbs. ($100) for each depositor.

The New Haven railroad will drop forty trains a day from its passenger schedule beginning tomorrow morning. The economy will result in the dropping of about 300 employees, and is expected to save from $25,000 to $30,000 a week.

The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union embraces all men in any direct way connected with the handling of meat in the packing houses, and has a membership of 60,000 men. It was organized two and a half years ago by Michael Donnelly. At that time there were many independent unions in the various packing centers. Mr. Donnelly, himself, a cheap butcher in Omaha, began the work of gathering these together in one central union.

Mine workers of the Lackawanna and Wyoming districts have adopted the insurance plan devised by President T. D. Nichols. The members of the union, by paying a monthly fee of 50 cents, will be entitled to a death benefit of $500. The plan also provides that a man must be in good standing to receive his benefit, a clause which is expected to keep dues paid up and strengthen the union.

During the year of 1901 the various boards of conciliation and arbitration in Great Britain are known to have settled 788 cases. Most of the actual stoppages were settled by the parties themselves or their representatives. The number of stoppages settled by arbitration and conciliation are 26, involving 21,700 work-people.

VERDICT OF THE PARTY

From the report of the committee on Credentials to the REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION, which was unanimously adopted by that convention, June 23, 1904.

Your committee report it to be their final judgment that the convention which elected John C. Spooner, J. V. Quaries, J. W. Babcock and Emil Hausch as delegates at large, and their alternates at large, to this convention WAS THE REGULAR CONVENTION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN WISCONSIN, and that the delegates elected by it are the regular elected delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin to the republican convention, and, as such, are entitled to seats in this convention.

REMOVE THE COVER.

It is about time that the taxpayers were furnished a little information concerning the inside methods of the present administration. With the talent of irregularity, to say the least, resting upon three departments, and with a governor who shows a disposition to conceal everything and reveal nothing, the public is given to understand that the state is a private corporation manipulated in the interests of a faction.

For a game of bluff pure and simple, the demand for an increased bond for State Treasurer Kempf has no parallel. The bond is large enough now. What the people want is the facts concerning the conduct of his office, and a balance sheet to show where the funds are at. They also want to know by what authority the state insurance commissioner collected $21,000 for examining an insurance company, and what became of the money. There is also some curiosity as to the pass question in the attorney-general's office, and the $2,000 school book fund has not been fully explained.

Take it all in all, the present state administration comes as near being a state chamber outfit as anything that ever happened.

The state paid $90,000 last year to game wardens. If there was anything to show for the investment it was not visible to ordinary vision.

This is the administration that is now seeking indorsement for vindication and a third term. It is a reform administration, so righteous that self defense is not necessary and whole some criticism an insult.

This is La Folletteism and not republicanism. It is as certain to fall as time is to expire. The people are waking up to the fact that pretense and not principle is the controlling force, and when the covers are all removed, the exposure will be complete.

STRANGE INFATUATION.

Why any number of sensible men can be influenced by the governor in his mad scramble for office is one of the problems difficult to explain. De feated in the convention, and turned down by the national party, he accuses its representatives of being prejudiced, and now forestalls the action of the supreme court, by claiming through his Milwaukee organ that the decision, if against him, will be unfair, and in defiance of this prospective decision, proposes to conduct an independent campaign under the banner of republicanism.

This defiant attitude is not at all surprising, so far as the governor is concerned, but it is beyond explanation on the part of his deluded followers. The republican party is not a defiant party. It believes in law and order and majority rule. It is older than La Folletteism and has more at stake than simply ambition for office.

The men throughout the state who are opposing La Folletteism are the backbone of the party. They are noted for loyalty, and conservative business sense. They are not office-seekers, or political grafters. Their only ambition is to redeem the party from the hypocrisy of reform. This ambition which should be shared by every republican who places party welfare above personal ambition. The party will endure after La Folletteism is forgotten and the men who are now so strangely infatuated will wonder why they were so deceived.

When Judge Parker goes to St. Louis the administration force of the exposition should make it worth his while to take his morning dip in the great canal inside the grounds and charge so much peep emfuyptai charge so much a peep.

Ex-Candidate Wall has called upon Judge Parker and told him the glad tidings that ex-Nominee Bryan will support him. Perhaps Judge Parker would have been just as glad if Mr. Wall had staid at home with his sad news.

Candidate Davis, who wishes to support the republican ticket every way possible, would a great deal towards the success of the ticket he wants to see elected by getting off it.

That a saloonkeeper should join the prohibition party is not surprising. The average saloon man could furnish more arguments for no license in a minute than a prohibitionist could in a week.

Judging from the number of people who have been enabled to leave Port Arthur since the siege began that city must have had a bigger population than Chicago or London when the fighting began.

A silver dollar is a great argument which many a voter in the congested city wards consider more than the arguments used by the spellbinders.

Chicago has a meat famine and a mayor. Leave Chicago with the meat famine and send the mayor to Lake Superior to catch fish for the city.

Castro is a man who never breaks his word. Hence he has seized the asphalt mines and means to keep them.

If you stop to figure up the exact losses of the Japs and Russians you will wonder how there are any fighting men left at all.

St. Louis is reaping the benefits of its injudicious advertising when it announced the Pike was a highly moral show.

Cortelyou and Taggart are both good at planning if some one else will furnish the money to carry out the game.

Mr. Root seems to be going to the bottom of the democratic ticket and detecting the weak points for the benefit of the general public.

Ex-presidents and ex-governors seem to be able to take care of themselves, but what shall we do with our ex-chairmen of national committees.

Uncle Sam has awakened to the need of a little naval demonstration of his own in the vicinity of Turkey.

Ex-Governor Hogg, of Texas, has started a party all of his own. He wants to be whole Hogg or none.

With a millionnaire to furnish it and gamblers to spend it the democratic party is well fixed, thank you.

With the Japanese almost entirely surrounding him and Alexoff in his rear Kuropatkin seems to have more than he can handle.

Russia is sending coal fleets out of the Black Sea that promise to be cooling vessels until the end of the trip.

Tomorrow is the day the supreme court meets and it may make political history in the state.

PRESS COMMENT

Oshkosh Northwestern: The packers claim to be doing a satisfactory amount of business in spite of the strike, and from the press they are charging it looks as though they may be right about it.

Minneapolis Tribune: A Chicago university professor broke into a local pulpit on Sunday to tell the world is growing more pessimistic. Our advice are not to that effect. Why, we saw more happy, hopeful and contented people on a round trip to the lake on Sunday than Schopenhauer ever dreamt of in his dismal philosophy.

Waupaca Leader: William Cole, of Oshkosh received a one year's sentence in the prison for stealing a cornet. As long as he didn't bring the instrument to the pen with him the officials ought to grant him lots of good time.

Milwaukee News: It has not yet occurred to Governor La Follette that the nest of railway attorneys in the attorney general's office is contaminating to the pure and undefiled that ride on transportation furnished by the state.

Milwaukee Sentinel: The Memphis Scimitar, referring to the Booker Washington lunch, sneers at Mr. Roosevelt's "fondness for negro companionship." That is pretty good, coming from a section of the country with a large half-caste population.

Chicago Record-Herald: Bishop Potter has assisted at the opening of a saloon in New York. Inasmuch as he has been able to get his articles accepted by the magazines without going to this extreme some people can't imagine why he did it.

Racine Journal: Now Folk must endorse on his ticket the nominees for secretary of state and auditor, Messrs. Cook and Allen, or split the ticket according to State Treasurer Williams. An alternative exceedingly unpleasant to consider.

Superior Telegram: A Minot man boarded a moving train after it had knocked him down twice. He had the persistence of a man who had boarded on his father-in-law for a long time.

El Paso Herald: With all the Chinese pouring in, the Transvaal will have a three-cornered race question to wrestle with even if Boer and Briton finally decide to sink their own little scrap.

Evening Wisconsin: People who contract the habit of going down the pike, at St. Louis, can indulge that habit at the Wisconsin state fair. This will enable them to taper off, and incidentally help the fair.

Merrill News: Its not a question of what would La Follette do without his game wardens, oil inspectors, etc., but rather what will they turn their hand to when the governor sinks into oblivion in November.

Milwaukee Journal: Prosperity is a great thing; it tends to diffuse itself and increase the comfort of all. When any one is prospering his gain helps, or should help, all about him, to better things. All have to share depression and even suffering; why should they not share in prosperity?

Green Bay Gazette: Among other strange things caught by local fishermen at Marinette recently is a pickled with a glass eyeball, according to Marinette papers. The man had the fish to prove a part of his story, and the story itself proves without question the claim that he caught the fish ball, probably many of them. The explanation given is that it was a doll's eye found in the stomach of the fish.

Racine News: Up 15 July 23, the attendance at the World's Fair in St. Louis aggregated 5,105,735. This includes many free passes. The daily attendance is now over 80,000, and last Saturday the highest figure was reached, being 102,000. The prospect now is that the attendance will gradually increase until the close. In this event the fair will be a financial success.

Ashland Press: The discovery of a three or four thousand dollar shortage in the state treasury, together with the endorsement of the treasurer, suggests the fact that an investigation of the books in all the departments at Madison, may result in other interesting discoveries. An administration, which spends all its time in politics, whose appointees in all departments spend nine-tenths of their time in politics, cannot but be an object of suspicion. The one object in life of the large salaried force of employees at Madison, not to speak of the game wardens scattered throughout the state, is to further the political interests of their boss.

New York Times: The plan of the American Federation of Labor to control the next congress, so far, at least, as the house of representatives is concerned, by putting candidates to the nomination and condemning to defeat all who do not give immediate and satisfactory answers, is interesting, but its practical importance is as great as that of most of the plans devised by Samuel Gompers and his cabinet to subordinate the United States to the control of the body over which he presides.

Duluth Evening Herald: The Herald was one of the first papers in the country to condemn the trading stamp scheme. In its efforts it was ably seconded by the merchants of Duluth, who could readily see the undesirable character of the scheme. Now the leading merchants from one end of the country to the other have united in opposition to the trading stamp, and their opposition is sustained by many of the commercial organizations. It is the fraudulent character of the plan that is most objectionable because it leads the consumer into the false notion that he is getting something for nothing when in reality he pays more for the end than the "gifts" are worth.

The Virtue of Patience. "Chillun," said Uncle Rastus, "dar's a gran' lesson to be learned 'm de foolish outworn. He gits up early in de mornin' an' goes fo' th' an' eats de little sproutin' melon vine. Ef he had sense enough to stay in bed a while longer de vine 'd perduce a melon an' he might eat sump'n wuf while. Patience, chillun, am a great virtue."

CASE TAKEN TO SUPREME COURT

Republican Question Will Be Presented Tomorrow Morning by Attorney Olin.

Initial steps in the matter of having the nominees of the republican convention at Madison placed under the name republican on the National ballots will be taken before the supreme court at Madison tomorrow. An application will be made to compel the secretary of State to make the republican ticket up so as to include the names of the nominees chosen at the convention held in the opera house will be presented by John Olin and Mr. Greene, the attorneys for the republican party in Wisconsin, in speaking of the matter this morning M. G. Jeffris said: "The only thing done tomorrow will be the filing of an application to compel the secretary of State to make the ticket up as we say."

Mr. Jeffris expects to be in Madison tomorrow on other business. It is reported that attorneys Chynoweth and Barnes of Rhinelander will represent the Governor before the court. Upon this decision will depend which column the ticket handle by Mr. Cook will be placed.

LAST SAD RITES FOR EDITH WARNER

Were Held Sunday Afternoon at the Family Home—Interment at Waupun.

The funeral services over the remains of Miss Edith Warner were held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. J. H. Tippett, officiating. Miss Warner was president of the Delta Alpha Sunday school class, and was beloved by all. The honorary pallbearers were the Misses Pearl Hall, Hattie Weaver, Iva Poorman, Amy Ross, Edie Cummings and Mable Woodman, all members of the class. The song service was rendered by a male quartette consisting of A. J. Cleveland, E. E. Van Pool, H. E. Cary and Fred Grove. The Epworth league, the M. E. choir, her class, and many others sent beautiful floral offerings. Everything that loving hands and hearts could do was done to make the affliction seem lighter, but we know the real sorrow can only be borne by those upon whom it falls. A large number of her class and other friends escorted the remains to the C. & N. W. train at 6:30 this morning. The interment will be at Waupun, Wis.

LAUNCH "SISTER" IS THE SPEEDIEST

Left Arthur Jones' Craft in Hor Wake in Six Mile Race Yesterday.

There was an impromptu six mile race on the Rock river yesterday between two gasoline launches, each claiming the title to the best speed. E. S. Williams and Charles B. Stevens had started up river with Mr. Williams' new launch "Sister," a craft built in Duluth and carrying a four-horse power Tuttle engine, when they met Supt. Arthur Jones of the Monterey woolen mills, coming down with the large six-horse power launch formerly owned by Messrs Marsden and Messer. Mr. Jones quickly brought his craft around and started in pursuit. The "Sister" held her distance and was imperceptibly gaining in spite of the short-cuts which she failed to take advantage of and before arriving at Mr. Williams' summer home she was a block away from her pursuer. Mr. Williams is something of a Sir Thomas Lipton, having discarded two launches already because they were too slow.

BIG TEAMS WERE BOTH DEFEATED

PORT WASHINGTON WON FROM JANESVILLE 3 TO 1

IN FASTEST GAME OF YEAR

Clinton Maroons Were Shut Out at Freeport—Red Sox Beat First Ward Nine.

Yesterday was another big day for the baseball fans but the local teams did not fare so well as on former occasions. The largest crowd of the season gathered at Yost's park to see Port Washington and her star pitcher, Groth, defeat the Janesville team by the score of 3 to 1. The "whirlwind" in the box had a pretty curve which the locals failed to analyze and succeeded in striking out nine men. Janesville, however, put up a rattling good game and played ball to the finish. It was the second game lost this season. Features of the game were a running catch by Blakely, a one hand stop by Perring, and the gathering in of a hot liner by Cole. The Spaulding of Chicago are looked for next Sunday.

The Game in Detail
Janesville made six hits; Port Washington, nine. Two-base hits were made by F. Mauch, P. Mauch, and Melrhing. One base on balls allowed by Palmer. Struck out by Groth; 9; by Palmer, 4. Hit by pitcher, Traverrah. Left on bases—Janesville, 6; Port Washington, 5. Following is the tabulated summary of the game:

Janesville	R.	H.	P.O.	A.	E.
Cole, 2b.	1	1	3	2
Perring, 3b.	0	0	5	4	0
Rubland, 1b.	0	1	9	1	0
F. Broughton, ss.	0	1	2	2	2
Green, cf.	0	1	1	0	0
C. Broughton, c.	0	2	6	3	0
Blakely, lf.	0	0	1	1	0
Traverrah, rf.	0	0	0	2	1
	3	10	27	17	3

At Freeport the Clinton Maroons were shut out, the final score being 4 to 0. The four runs were made by Freeport in the ninth inning. Two new players from Madison, one of them a third baseman, were put in to show their metal in this game and one of them failed to make good. The Maroons were disposed to lay the blame for their defeat on his shoulders.

At Goose Island the Red Sox defeated the First Ward Regulars by the score of 7 to 3. Up to the eighth inning the score stood 6 to 0 for the Red Sox, when a wild throw over second base started the ball rolling for the other side. The lineup was as follows:

Red Sox	First Ward
L. Hammond, c.	W. Gregory
Henschke, p.	Richter
Hill, 1b.	B. R.
Bahr, 2b.	McIntosh
Schunacher, 3b.	Kreuger
Karl, 4b.	J. Gregory
Schmidt, lf.	Clithero
F. Hammond, cf.	Springman
Holtz, rf.	Briggs

Henschke for the Red Sox struck out fifteen men. Richter struck out five. M. Bliss was umpire.

OTHER GAMES PLAYED

The Edgerton team defeated the Second Ward by the score of 11 to 6 in a twelve inning game played at Maroon park. In the morning the Fourth Ward nine defeated "Squat" Hiller's "Colts" from the first ward by the score of 14 to 8.

MAYOR HARRISON OFFERS TRIBUTE

TO THE BEAUTY OF JANESVILLE WOMEN.

STRIKE SETTLEMENT FAR OFF

Chicago's Executive Fears He Will Have No Trout Fishing This Year—Enjoyed First Visit Here.

Attired in a suit of quiet grey, a straw hat of Panama pattern, a pink shirt, turn-down collar, and a string tie of sober hue, Mayor Carter H. Harrison of Chicago stood on the North-Western depot platform last evening waiting for the 7:10 train. Accompanied by James F. Bate and Lucien Davidson, city hall reporters for the Record-Herald, and Mrs. Davidson he had just returned from a two hours' drive about the city and seemed much impressed with what he had seen. Janesville seemed to him a city fairly humming with the spirit of industry. The beet sugar factory and the cement post concern had both attracted his attention and the development of the water power here had been a subject of careful inquiry. Mayor Harrison is preparing a bill to be introduced in the next Illinois legislature providing for the utilization of the Chicago drainage canal to furnish all the power and light needed for the traction and illuminating systems in that city.

Many Handsome Women
"I was struck by the number of handsome women we observed while driving through your city today," said his honor. "They look so busy turning out from one side of the street to the other and I rather think I am a trifle lame from the exertion. No, there was no politics in my visit. I was called back from Huron Mountain, Michigan, where I had gone on my annual trout fishing expedition, eight hours after my arrival there. This is the first time I have been able to get away from Chicago for a day since the beginning of the strike. There seems to be no prospect of an immediate settlement and I am afraid it is going to drag along until it wears itself out. Trout fishing ends with the first of September and that month is a useless one for me, so far as outdoor recreation is concerned. But I have my duck hunting in October to fall back on. We have had a fine time here and I have enjoyed my first visit in your beautiful city immensely." Mr. Bate said that he was coming back to spend his two weeks' vacation here—hunting antelopes or catamounts, he wasn't particular which.

FISHING NOT GOOD

Mayor Harrison and his party arrived in Janesville at four o'clock Saturday afternoon, and were immediately conducted to the dock where they embarked for the trip to N. Carlson's summer home, "Elm Park." Mr. Davidson is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. N. Carlson and it was through him that the invitation was extended to Chicago's executive. After passing a pleasant evening at the lodge the visitors got up at five o'clock yesterday morning, put on their rubber boots and started on a trip to Indian Ford in F. Peterson's boat. Owing to the low water, however, they were unable to get past "The Narrows" and the visions of a fish dinner faded into thin air. At four o'clock in the afternoon they started on a long drive around and through the city and were able to visit many of the points of interest before train-time.

WHOLE CITY WAS IN A COLD BLAST

Keen Wind Swept Over the Entire City Yesterday Afternoon—Like October Weather.

About four o'clock on Sunday the wind changed to the east and from that time on persons enjoying picnics or the parks shivered and deserted their comfortable nooks for their homes. An October chill raced along the backbone of Janesville, and a surprised city shrugged its shoulders and shivered. A blast of wind which had a Medicine Hat sting, although officials reported it as having come from the east, was suggestive more of coal bills than of dog days. Shortly after the noon hour the mercury began its downward course, which continued almost uninterruptedly until 8 p. m., when it touched 59 degrees. The result was that persons who found themselves far from home and clad only in outing flannels and flimsy gauzes were made to long for a cozy nook near some cheerful fireplace.

HOW GOD MADE USE OF JOSEPH

AND FITTED HIM THROUGH MANY TRIALS

TO SAVE IMPERILED EGYPT

President Daland of Milton College, Tells Story of the Coat of Many Colors.

President Daland of Milton college took for the text of his discourse at the Baptist church Sunday morning the story of Joseph, as illustrating how good may be wrought from apparent evil. It has been a bad thing for heaven when Jacob had treated Joseph as the favored son and had placed him above his brothers by giving him a coat of many colors. Children should be treated alike and Mary should not have better gowns than Sallie because Sallie takes no care of hers and will never shine in society, anyway. So it was a bad thing for Joseph to strut about in his long frock coat. And it was worse for him that he was encouraged to tell tales on his brothers. In view of all the circumstances it was a marvel of marvels that he turned out so well at all. His self conceit had taken hold of him so strongly that he dreamed that the sun, moon, and stars bowed down to him and his brothers' sheep bowed to his sheep. Some may say that God sent these dreams for prophecy's sake. Granted. But God used the material which he finds in our minds. No original things get in. If you have bad dreams you are a bad man. For dreams are of the stuff of our own mentality.

Hatred of Brothers.

And so Joseph's brothers hated him and he came to feel that they hated him. When a man comes to feel that the hands of other men are turned against him he is in a critical condition. For those who love their fellow men are with God and God is with them. Joseph was thrown into a pit by his brothers and his first great sorrow probably came to him then. Then God used the self-interest of the brothers to deliver him from the pit into slavery. And this was the second great trial. None but those who have been slaves can appreciate the evil that comes of slavery. The color question is a result of it. The Jewish question arises from the fact that a race of people have been kept down for centuries and have been compelled to get their living by their wits. That's why they are outstripping us now in many fields of endeavor.

Peril of Success

Another trial came to Joseph when he was falsely accused and thrown into prison. Give a man a reputation as a thief and he is often driven to become one. Then Joseph was lifted from the depths of degradation to the highest place in the kingdom. He had everything in his hands and that was the hour of his greatest peril. His heart grew cold and he began to be the cynical egotist which his position seemed to call for. When the starving Egyptians came empty-handed to get grain to sell themselves if they wished to live. Then God sent his brothers to him as a lesson. Little Benjamin came to him. Suddenly his whole past stood before him and he reviled himself. He said to his brothers: "You meant to do me harm but good has resulted." If your face is set in the right direction good will come from evil. Fear God, in one respect Joseph had a good start. His father feared God. Keep fast hold of your faith in God and forget not the church where your father and mother prayed. When your first great sorrow comes then is the time to look to God. If you do not, your next sorrow will make you hard and cynical and the next perhaps, a very devil. Oh give yourself to God. The testing time will surely come and you will then have used God for the welfare of others, even as God used Joseph that prosperity might return to Egypt and that her people might not be wiped out by the famine.

JANESVILLE MAN WITH AUTO. CORPS

Started From Chicago This Morning for St. Louis—Many Machines in Line.

With 100 automobiles primed for the start, and with half as many manufacturers showing extraordinary interest in the run, the cavalcade of self propelled starters from Chicago for St. Louis this morning at 9 o'clock. There were at least forty motor cars from eastern and other cities in the caravan, and the rest of the number were Chicago machines. For the easterners it is virtually the last long lap in a 1,400 mile journey; for the motorists from Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Cedar Rapids it is the start of a magnificent run from one great city to another 300 miles distant.

Perhaps never before in the brief history of automobile has such a cavalcade assembled to get away on a protracted jaunt as gathered this morning. When, two weeks ago, thirty-five cars left New York, there were thirty-five manufacturers hoping ardently that this car or that one would cover itself with glory. There were additions to the ranks at Buffalo and Cleveland, a few dropped out temporarily, and now, when the Chicago motors get into the procession, most of the best known makers in this country and France will have entries.

The stop tonight will be at Pontiac, which will deliver its keys to the visitors. Tuesday evening Springfield is reached and there will be more joy. On Wednesday the tourists will roll down the "pile," hoarsely tooting their whistles. F. E. Wheeler of Janesville is with the party.

CHAPTER XIX.

ON their arrival at home that morning the two girls separated in the hall, Lydia going up to her room with a grave look on her face, and Miss Cosby turning into the parlor to take off her wraps. Mrs. Cranston joined her immediately.

"I was in the summer house and saw you coming," she said eagerly. "I thought I'd give Lydia a chance to go upstairs, for I am crazy to hear what you have to say. Well, did you meet the paragon?"

Miss Cosby rubbed her kid glove down from her wrist toward the tips of her slender fingers. "Meet him?—by a large majority, I assure you. We walked right into his den. Your scheme worked, Mrs. Cranston. As soon as we missed the major upstairs I told Lydia that you said he might be down at the grain warehouse, and she ordered the carriage there. I have one thing to tell you, Mrs. Cranston—Kitty was smiling—"what are the rates of board in this town?"

"Rates of board?" exclaimed Mrs. Cranston. "What on earth do you want to know that for?"

"I'm going to pay my board while I'm with you," said the girl, with mock seriousness. "I know you invited me down here to help you out of your mess, and I have washed my hands of the whole business. I'm out of it from now on—out. Do you understand?"

"Oh, Kitty, do be serious—don't be silly."

"I'm out of it, I tell you," persisted the girl, pulling at the other glove. "I won't work for anybody that don't take care. Why didn't you tell me this Buckley was a regular Apollo in a business suit? Why, I never felt in my life as I did with him. I may be romantic, cracked, soft or something, but I simply stood and stared at him, unable to say a thing that was sensible. Besides, we were all upset—excited to death, and—"

"Excited!" gasped Mrs. Cranston. "Why, what about?"

"Oh, about that White Cap affair down there last night. You never heard half of it. The major hinted that he was only some drunken mountain roustabout, personal friends of Mr. Buckley's, when it was—oh, only a little thing like a great, tall god of a man standing in a door during a mob of fifty strong to pass in after the man they were pursuing! The man in the door with the revolver and the blazing eyes was George Buckley, and the little, dried up man he was offering his life for was no relation to him and a man he could not be reconciled with."

"Kitty, you surprise me," said Mrs. Cranston.

"You'll be more than surprised before this thing is over with. If I'm any judge of human nature," Kitty laughed. "Why, Mrs. Cranston, you are battling with Niagara falls in a duet when you are trying to keep two people like Lydia and that young man from admiring each other, especially Lydia or any real woman." She then proceeded to describe minutely all that had taken place in the office. At times her voice would clog and her eyes fill to overflowing. "And the beauty of it was," she ended, "that the hero of it all was mad enough to kick the people who were solving out his prices."

"Lydia heard all that!" said Mrs. Cranston.

"Yes, she heard it all. You have always thought she was proud and haughty and cold. Huh! She melted all over and ran out at the eyes. She doesn't comprehend it any more than a baby comprehends life. He followed us outside to apologize—just think of that—apologize! He tried to laugh it off. I introduced myself. I had to. Lydia was acting as if she were in a dream. She was asking questions about the exact spot where he had stood, as reverently, Mrs. Cranston, as a girl looking for the grave of a soldier hero. Then the father of the rescued boy came out and went all over it again. I've been to plays that moved me, but always, away down in my heart, by the knowledge that it was only acting, that this morning was the real thing. They say all the world loves a lover. I was asked to thwart that pair, but when I saw those two together with his great, hungry, dreamy eyes that seemed full of eternal suffering with love for her actually burning in their depths, and she with her sweet, wondering face—I felt like an egg sucking dog! I wanted to put out my hands and draw their heads together. Love is beautiful always. It was like a glimpse of heaven this morning. I always considered Lydia a strong woman. I admire her more now than ever. All along she has been what there is in this man and been trying to give him simple justice."

"Mrs. Cranston groaned aloud and sat down, covering her face with her hands. "I reckon we'll have to send her off," she said.

"Send her off? Where to? Send her to Mars, and she'll still see his eyes and hear his voice and—know she has wronged him for something he can't help. Think of that! You know, after all, he can't help what his father did. Huh! If a man like that adored me as he does Lydia Cranston and wanted me to marry him I'd do it if fifteen powdered and perfumed princesses stood with their arms stretched out to me, and—yes, if he had fathers looking out of jail windows on every street corner in proud old Richmond. Oh, I've thrown up my job! I'm not the man for it. The weight of a hair would make me work on the other side. You'd better send me away. My own heart is hopelessly in danger."

"I have never met the real thing in man form before. Think of it! There's Charles Mason, at home, who will talk to a girl by the hour about how he was obliged to call Delaney out for insulting Richmond girls, and if Delaney hadn't humbly apologized shots might have been exchanged, with the recent on the night. That's the fashionable, bouquet courage. The real thing is where a man acts like this Buckley did last night and then gets as mad as the dev—as mad as the very devils when it is mentioned in his presence. Mrs. Cranston, I believe you have been trying to keep God from doing a beautiful piece of work so that you can do an ugly one—hideous except to the sight of narrow, squint-eyed people. I may be getting crooked mentally for not espousing the governor's cause, but after what I've seen this morning, after seeing that couple together and reading their throbbing hearts, I can see it only one way."

"The son of a convict!" groaned Mrs. Cranston. "Never, never! Lydia will not do it. She respects our feelings too much. You say she doesn't yet realize that she's in love with him?"

"Not yet, but she's a light sleeper. Mrs. Cranston, somebody will throw cold water in her face, and she'll open her eyes. I fancy if you and the major were to begin to urge her marriage to Governor Telfair that she'd rub her eyes and wonder if she had a nightmare. She wouldn't talk driving home. I took her hand. It was as cold as ice, but her face was on fire. I had spent the whole morning sneezing at everything we came to—the little law of flees and stores and the clerks coming to wait on us without their coats—and as we approached the warehouse I laughed at its dingy appearance and told her I didn't see how she could stand to live in such a town. On the way home she looked up at me and said: 'You may as well quit running Darley down, Kitty. I have found more real worth and nobility of character here than in any city I ever visited.' There you are, Mrs. Cranston! The first thing a woman begins to do in falling in love is to justify her choice, and your daughter can justify hers like a judge on the bench."

"There is one thing that will make her hesitate," said Mrs. Cranston, looking up with a steady stare. "Her father's heart is set on her marrying Governor Telfair, and the major's health is failing. I really believe if she should not obey his wishes—if she were to do such a dastardly thing as to marry this Buckley, it would kill him."

"That situation may influence her," admitted the Virginia girl. "A woman will often marry a man she doesn't love to gratify those she does. But if Lydia does marry Governor Telfair, even if she lives to give her husband grandchildren. But, oh, Mrs. Cranston, I wish it could be otherwise. I wish, with all my heart, that I could walk down this minute and call that man out and tell him I'd come to give Lydia to him, to have and to hold forever. And when the divine fire blazed up in his manly face I'd like to kiss him and assure him I was not a spy working against him, but his friend. 'The dear fellow thought he had made himself ridiculous before us this morning, when he had simply tangled himself up in our heartstrings and left them bleeding in his favor.'"

"Don't, don't!" Mrs. Cranston rose and stood frowning. "I see I can't count on you, Kitty; but at least, you will not—do you know what I mean?"

"No. I shall have nothing to do with either way," said Kitty, with a smile. "I can promise you that—at least, I think I can."

FARM GARDEN

THE MAKEUP OF SOILS.

The Influence of Its Mechanical Condition on Drainage.
By C. G. ELLIOTT, Office of Experiment Stations.

Soil is made up of exceedingly fine particles of irregular shapes, varying composition and different properties. It is formed by the breaking down of rocks of different composition which are disintegrated by the weather, ground up and distributed by glacial action and floods and mixed with the products of successive ages of vegetable growth. These particles as they appear under the microscope are rough and irregular, some of them being exceedingly small. They range from coarse sand .004 of an inch to clay .0002 of an inch and less. The pecular shapes of particles as they appear under the microscope are shown in the cut. Particles of sand are not less than 200 times larger than particles of clay.

As the soil particles cannot flow together so as to form a solid mass, there is a large amount of intervening space, which in an average soil equals nearly half its volume. The smaller the particles, the greater the proportion of space. Thus clay contains 45 per cent of space, while a sandy truck soil contains 37 per cent, ordinary soils varying all the way between these extremes.

As the result of the surface tension each particle of soil holds a film of water over its entire surface and thus provides a supply of this material for the roots of plants. When the quantity of water in the soil is so much greater than is required to supply that which is held by surface tension that the remaining space is filled, the soil is said to be saturated. If we provide an outlet for the water, the surplus will pass off by force of gravity, leaving only the films which are held by surface tension and which furnish the desired moisture to plants. Thus from 15 to 20 per cent of all the water which a soil will hold will not pass off as drainage, but will remain as capillary water to contribute to the growth of plants and to further aid in the preparation of additional plant food. This necessary moisture moves through the soil independently of gravity by the force of capillary attraction or surface tension, which tends to distribute and equalize moisture in the soil.

About 50 per cent of the volume of ordinary soils is space which is always filled with water or air. The individual spaces are larger or smaller.

according as the soil grains are more or less minute. The fine grains present more surface in a given volume of soil and hence will retain the greater quantity of moisture. The coarser soils will permit a much freer percolation of water, and hence quicker drainage, than the finer ones.

Another mechanical condition of soils has more to do with their drainage properties than the differences already noted. It is the massing of particles of different character to form compound soil grains which lie contiguous and have spaces between them. Those who have examined the physical structure of soils minutely will have observed the granular structure of soils containing a mixture of humus and clay. Some subsoils are commonly known as "joint clays" from the fact that they show natural cleavage or fractures which mark them as soils easily drained. Others of a more sandy or gravelly nature mass their particles into irregular forms which cannot lie close together and are known as light subsoils. Still other clays appear to be wanting in the characteristics named, their individual particles lying compactly together and forming a dense mass capable of retaining a larger percentage of water than any other variety, and are commonly known as retentive or impervious soils. Some of these mechanical characteristics are illustrated in Figs. 1, 2 and 3.

Jeff and Munroe In Training

The Heavyweight Champion Says He Will Be In Fine Shape to Fight the Miner Aug. 26. Harvard-Yale Victory Abroad.

Champion Jim Jeffries is training in Los Angeles, Cal., for his coming fight with Jack Munroe. He is said to still jump when walking, but this does not prevent him from going about town. Jim has been warned that he must favor his knee considerably during the early period of his training for his bout with Munroe, which occurs Aug. 26. He has been especially warned not to put a sudden strain upon the injured member, such as would come from jumping or a sudden stop after a run. Jeffries has promised to obey these instructions, and his trainers have also been warned not to do anything that may bring on a recurrence of the trouble. The champion said, in an interview on the subject:

"It goes without saying that I regretted my inability to meet Munroe on the date originally set, not only because of the disappointment to him and the public, but also on account of other personal arrangements which would have meant several thousand dollars to me. There will be no further postponement, however, and I will be in the ring ready for business on the night of Aug. 26 without fail. I will have to do much of my training all over again, but I will be fit for the fight of my life when I face Munroe. It was hard luck that prevented me from keeping the original date, but it won't occur again. It couldn't have happened to my ankles—they are the strongest part of me—but that left knee never has been well since an enthusiastic friend jumped on my back in San Francisco on the night of the Corbett fight. I slipped and my knee hit the curbstone, and it hasn't been right since."

well as he does there is no reason why a wrestler should not succeed as a scrapper.

Rogers, who stands over six feet and weighs more than 200 pounds in condition, is no novice with the gloves and should be able to hold his own with some of the heavies. In an interview recently he said:

"Yes, it is a fact that I am going to try for honors and money with the gloves. I once challenged Munroe to fight me. He was at Worcester, Mass., when I was at Fitchburg, Mass., just a few months after I beat Sandy Ferguson. Our club at Fitchburg offered to put Munroe on with me, and I challenged him, but his manager, Clark Ball, said Jack had other dates to fill. "I have always had an idea that I could give the miner quite an argument with the gloves. In fact, I think so now, and if Jeffries likes him I will be glad to give Jack a whirl. Of course if Munroe beats Jeff I don't suppose he will bother with me. Just the same, I am going to start out on the trail of these big mitt artists after I have won a few more good wrestling matches."

The recent victory in England of the Yale-Harvard athletes over the track and field stars of Oxford and Cambridge is still a favorite topic for comment on both sides of the Atlantic.

The Englishmen in again failing to cope successfully with our athletes show that they are far behind us in all round ability.

The Britons repeated their victories of two years ago in the long distance events, but in the sprint, weight events, the jumps and the hurdle the Yale-Harvard boys were again plainly superior. Shevlin's (Yale) victory in the hammer throw was ridiculously easy. He far outclassed the best weight expert in the college world of the United Kingdom, M. Spicer of Cambridge. Spicer of Harvard was forced to go the 100 yard dash in 9.45 seconds to win. Other American victors were G. F. Victor of Yale in the high jump, L. H. Sheffield of Yale, long jump, and E. J.

Carbonado, Ill., Aug. 8.—A change in the ownership of the great Ziegler colliery is announced and the deeds have just been filed for record. Leter, and the other by the widow of Levi Leter, the children, excepting Lady Curzon, and Seymour Morris, trustee of the Leter estate.

The two deeds convey 7,500 acres of land in Franklin county, including the town of Ziegler, for a consideration of $432,500, to the Ziegler Coal company, a corporation chartered in Delaware a few months ago, with a capital of several millions. The consideration represents that part of the property which can be conveyed legally, without infringing on any of the provisions of the elder Leter's will.

JAPANESE LOSE 10,000 IN FIGHT

TWO ATTACKS ARE PLANNED

Mukden and Liao Yang Appear to Be in Danger of Simultaneous Move by the Generals in Command of the Islanders' Army.

London, Aug. 8.—Two reports, each telling of the loss of 10,000 Japanese in the fighting going on in front of Port Arthur, have been received here. In a dispatch sent to the Czar General Steessel says that in the attacks on the stronghold made on July 26, 27, and 28 the enemy was repulsed with a loss of 10,000 killed and wounded.

From Chefoo a cablegram has been received which says that according to Chinese information a battle was fought at Port Arthur on Aug. 5, the Mikado's forces losing 10,000 men. While the dates of the two reported battles are different, the estimates of killed and wounded are similar. Whether both refer to the same engagement cannot be definitely determined.

Japs Near Fortress.

It is also stated in Chefoo dispatches that the Japanese force which captured Wolf's hill is now entrenched in the valley about two-thirds of a mile from the main fortress at Port Arthur.

A Japanese cruiser is alleged to have struck a new mine and to have sunk immediately in the vicinity of Cristova battery.

The Russian cruiser Bayan has a small hole above her water line which was inflicted by the explosion of a mine which had floated to the harbor entrance.

The Japanese have occupied Lousa bay, landing troops with the probable intention of attacking west of the city.

Advancing on Mukden.

Advice received from Liao Yang state that the Japanese are advancing on Mukden, and that it is thought both Liao Yang and Mukden will be attacked simultaneously. If this is true, a decisive battle is assured.

Tokio dispatches indicate that General Koropatin has extricated his army from the cordon in the vicinity of Hal Cheng. General Olai, however, is in front of the Russians, and is rapidly advancing on Mukden. This still leaves Koropatin between two fires.

Secure Good Positions.

The Times correspondent at Tokio under date of Aug. 7, says there are unofficial reports there that the Japanese have captured commanding positions north and northeast of Port Arthur at a distance of 2,750 yards from the main line of Russian defenses.

In an official report forwarded to Tokio Admiral Togo states that on Aug. 5 an exciting fight took place between torpedo-boat destroyers off Port Arthur. Fourteen Russian boats were driven back into the harbor by three destroyers of the Japanese fleet.

OLD MOATED GRANGE

ONE OF ENGLAND'S PICTURESQUE RUINS.

Its Records Date Back to the Year 1093, When It Was an Ecclesiastical Store House—Interesting Church Hidden Away in Lonely Village.

(Special Correspondence.)

Owing to the rapid increase of "brick boxes with slate lids," more or less unlovely, it is now delightfully refreshing to come across any building with the least pretensions to picturesque, writes an English correspondent. A few such buildings are still occasionally seen in the neighborhood of Liverpool or within the compass of a half-holiday ramble. Though the buildings may be few and far between, the majority are far enough away from encroaching towns to survive, for another generation or two, amidst green fields and clumps of sheltering trees. In the Cheshire portion of the district to which the greater number of rambles give their attention on holidays there are some old and picturesque houses, and among these Irbly Hall is perhaps the least well-known of our local moated granges, the village from which the hall takes its name being out of the beaten track. How to get there? Unfortunately, nowadays one has to tramp through miles of suburbs to reach the country. So depressing are the suburbs, with their "brick boxes" in straight rows and terraces, that it is really economy of time and of wear and tear to one's feelings to start for a ramble by going to a convenient point by rail; this, of course, if you are old-fashioned enough not to cycle. Should the railway journey be decided on, you cannot do better than take train to Thurston, which is the nearest station for Irbly.

From the gate leading into the high road in front of the hall is to be obtained a fine view. Beneath the trees and planted in the springing grass there are plenty of double yellow daffodils just now, and these, with the blue scillas in the borders, and purple crocuses, compose a nice picture in the flickering sunshine. Irbly is no mushroom village, for its records date as far back as 1093, when the manor was presented by Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, to the Abbey of St. Werburg, and the hall became one of its principal manor houses, each of which was required to be of sufficient size to accommodate the Abbot, as well as his court, when he arrived on his periodical visits. Thus Irbly Hall became an ecclesiastical grange or store-house, and the moat was evidently made for the purpose of defending the precious stores of produce from possible marauders, the inhabitants especially fearing the rapacious Welsh! The only fragment of old timber is a carved oak panel of uncommon design, set in the small gable over the entrance. The "township" of Irbly contains 813 acres, and is described as entirely devoted to agricultural purposes. Small as the village is, it has two inns, one at each end of the village street. This probably atones for the neighboring hamlet of Thurston having none.

In the course of a ramble, if one chooses to extend it towards Bladon, Thingwall and Woodchurch may be visited. Thingwall is of Norse origin, and means the "hill of the meeting." It was there, probably, that the Norse invaders held their local parliament, and from this little hill which, until recent years, was surmounted by a windmill, a conspicuous landmark, they held a commanding position, overlooking the estuary of the Mersey and a fair stretch of country towards the Dee. Woodchurch is obviously from the Anglo-Saxon Wuduwood—literally, "the church in the wood." Arrowe, the name of the park close to Woodchurch, is another of the obscure names, spelt Arwe and which slants away to the left, out of line with the body of the church. This is supposed to be purposely arranged, as many churches, dedicated to the Holy Cross, were so built to commemorate the legend that the Savior's head inclined to the right of the Cross. A tiny window in the chancel is said to be Norman. The simple shape and deep embrasure certainly give one that impression. Several medallions in the otherwise plain east window are interesting from the fact that they were brought from a French monastery suppressed at the Revolution, and remind one of similar medallions in a small window in Farndon church, in the strawberry country. The 15th century benches of the choir stalls are elaborately carved with poppyheads, etc., and one, with figures of small boys, shows the costume of the period. The clothes were then fastened with buttons and straps, and these details have been carefully recorded in oak for the decoration of future generations. The font, which is placed beneath the tower, is 15th century work, and, although not particularly beautiful, is in excellent preservation. There are numerous other features in and out of the building worth attention, and among these the dole shelves, with the date and names of the donors carved thereon. The dates are 1642 and 1670, and since then to the present day the poor widows of the village have had leaves of bread given to them every Saturday. Woodchurch seems to have been singled out for several charities and bequests, including a "cow charity," instituted in 1525, which supplied cows to the poorer villagers at a nominal rental of 2s. 8d. per annum.

AERONAUT IS KILLED WHEN MAKING DESCENT

Cuts Loose From Balloon After It Reaches Great Height, But Parachute Falls of Its Purpose.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 8.—Before several thousand people Sunday night Less Warren, a daring young aeronaut of Gainesville, Fla., was killed in a most tragic manner. Warren made a balloon ascent at Eaton park. He reached the height of three-fourths of a mile, when he cut his parachute loose. Like a rocket he shot toward the earth.

The parachute failed to open, and the horrified spectators stood breathless as he shot through space. For a quarter of a mile the balloonist continued to gain velocity. Wounded and falling from the scene, Warren closed his eyes as they realized his fate.

Warren fell like a bullet, struck the top of a high tree, cutting the branches down with him. He struck the ground with a sickening thud in the midst of women, who fell fainting. His neck, both legs and right arm were broken. The bones from his legs protruded through the flesh and were driven into the ground. His parachute, which lodged in the tree tops, showed that he had unhooked the safety belt.

Warren was 23 years old. His daring leaps have created wide attention.

British Drink Much Beer. The British people drink more beer than the Germans, while the Germans drink more spirits.

CANADIANS ANNEX TERRITORY.

Expedition to Hudson's Bay Puts Step to Yankee Free-Trading.

St. John's N. F. Aug. 8.—The sailing steamer Erik, which was chartered by the government and conveyed an auxiliary expedition to the steamer Neptune, which has been in Hudson's bay for the last year with the Canadian official expedition sent for the purpose of annexing territory there, returned here Sunday, bringing Major Moodie of the northwest mounted police, governor of Hudson's bay. The Erik met the Neptune at Port Burwell, Ungava bay, Monday, July 25, and spent a week transferring coal and supplies. The Erik started on the return journey Aug. 2, while the Neptune cruised north to Lancaster sound, holding the British flag and proclaiming British sovereignty over that region.

TRAIN ROBBER YIELDS BOOTY.

Cash, Diamonds and Securities Amounting to $50,000 Recovered.

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 8.—Fifty thousand dollars worth of securities, cash and diamonds, which had formed part of the loot of the Bear Mouth train robbery, have been recovered. John Christie, arrested in Hope, N. D., guided Special Agent McKeltridge to the place where the cache was made, eight miles below the scene of the robbery and on the same side of the river. The securities filled a flour sack.

QUARTET DONE IN GOOD ADVICE.

Don't tell the men how much money you spend for dainty ornaments.

Don't take up questions for discussion which brings out family expenditures.

Don't think it is incumbent on you to make known just how you stand or income.

Don't go about complaining of the fate which compels you to be economical.

Immensity of North Forests.

The northern belt of forests is perhaps greater in extent than all the other timber belts and reserves of Canada combined. It extends from the eastern coast of Labrador north of the fiftieth parallel in a northwesterly direction to Alaska, a distance of some 3,000 miles, with an average width of perhaps 500 miles.

SENATOR DAVIS' DAUGHTER.

She Is Wife of Senator Elkins and a Charming Hostess.

The nomination of ex-Senator Henry G. Davis of West Virginia as the Democratic candidate for vice president recalls a romance of politics. A little more than a quarter of a century ago Mr. Davis, who was at that time in the United States senate, introduced to Washington society his beautiful daughter, Miss Hallie Davis. She was a dashing brunette, fascinating, accomplished and intellectual. Among her admirers was the young delegate in congress from New Mexico, Stephen D. Elkins, a widower, rich, popular and ambitious. He fell ardently in love with Miss Davis, and his suit was successful. The marriage resulted in his leaving the west and in his identifying his fortunes with those of his father-in-law. He applied his energies to the development of West Virginia, became many times a millionaire, a coal baron, served as secretary of war and is now United States senator. Mrs. Elkins has been the inspiration of his life. Their magnificent home at Elkins, W. Va., is named Hallhurst in her honor.

Death Result of Greediness.

A perch weighing 13 pounds has been captured at Birmingham, England, having tightly jammed in its throat the body of a half-pound roach. The head of the latter was too big for the perch's throat, and the result was that both fish were suffocated.

Pincushion Swallowed Up Needles.

A lady in this city, reading that a pincushion that had been in use for some time, on being opened developed about 150 needles, had the curiosity to pull apart a pincushion that she had been using about twenty-five years. She found by actual count 410 needles.—Hartford Courant.
